- MacMillan said the video regarding the bio-engineering workshop will be available on the GWAS website by mid-January
- On December 8, 2021, GWAS Executive Director, M. Krainer, made a presentation to the BRBC Quarterly Forum and received encouragement from a retired water-quality specialist, to further investigate concerns regarding lead from target shooting in streams

6) Public Member Reports

- Butters said the drought in 2021 has resulted in a shortage of hay and feed for livestock which led to extremely high prices and the recent cold weather has not helped
- Butters said the Alberta Financial Services Corporation (AFSC) has a voluntary drought insurance program that has helped to cover costs for qualified producers in this drought situation with high-priced feed, but there has been government help for producers to get through
- Bedry said she has had some issues with predators and said a wolf hurt a heifer
- Bedry said she has been using some greenfeed and said it may attract bears in the spring
- MacMillan said she is hoping some moisture gets into the ground for pastures and fire suppression
- Phillips said the Alberta Society of Professional Biologists (ASPB) newsletter had an interesting article about a new conservation initiative that will be working in Alberta to identify key biodiversity areas in the province
- Phillips said the initiative was introduced by the International Union for the Conservation of Nature (IUCN)
- Phillips said there are biologists in Alberta working to identify what these areas would be and said what makes this initiative new, is that it will bring everything in the natural environment together as a whole ecosystem to identify these areas
- Phillips said Alberta has a high amount of biodiversity areas and said there are 54 nationally endemic species

- Phillips said two sites mentioned in the article are the Castleguard Cave in Banff National Park and the Castle-Waterton corridor because of the high number of species and the biodiversity in that area
- Phillips said there may be areas within the MD of Bighorn identified in this process
